

A demonstration of some alert boxes created with `mdframed`.

Well, this is some text that should be typeset into the alert box as shown here. On the left you see the alert sign, which is configurable. To use Knuth's danger sign, load the `manfnt` package and use `\dbend` as optional parameter. To use a left hand pointing right, use the `dingbat` package and use `\leftpointright`.

Well, this is some text that should be typeset into the alert box as shown here. On the left you see the alert sign, which is configurable. To use Knuth's danger sign, load the `manfnt` package and use `\dbend` as optional parameter. To use a left hand pointing right, use the `dingbat` package and use `\leftpointright`.

Well, this is some text that should be typeset into the alert box as shown here. On the left you see the alert sign, which is configurable. To use Knuth's danger sign, load the `manfnt` package and use `\dbend` as optional parameter. To use a left hand pointing right, use the `dingbat` package and use `\leftpointright`.

Well, this is some text that should be typeset into the alert box as shown here. On the left you see the alert sign, which is configurable. To use Knuth's danger sign, load the `manfnt` package and use `\dbend` as optional parameter. To use a left hand pointing right, use the `dingbat` package and use `\leftpointright`.